After studying architecture, I find myself farther from a clear career path than when I started. You see, I now understand the life I will have if I follow the footsteps of those before me. The problem is, I do not want that path.

I am on a search for new better paths. Paths of higher levels of social organizing which can catalyze our humanity. I find myself obsessed with architectures of the non physical. As it appears, these are often the actual shapers of our world.
